The Maccabee Declaration of Americanism

(Adopted Chicago, July, 1919)

WE ARE AMERICANS AND MACCABEES, one and inseparable. We stand united in the morn on this new day which signalizes the reconstruction of the world and the enthronement of the ideals of "the brother of our humanity" and we are ready to meet the challenge of the hour as men and fraters.

While nations are in a maelstrom of unrest, while emperors and potentates are being thrust aside, and while governmental policies of centuries no longer obtain, there is evidence of the acceptance of the message of "peace on earth, good will toward men" as the chart of individual and national conduct, foretelling the brotherhood of nations, and the time when

"Man to man the world o'er Shall brothers be for a' that."

We here vow our love for America as the freeman's hope and home. We believe in the American ideal of citizenship equality and the mutual interests of capital and labor. We hail the promised day when employer and employed shall meet and work together on a common basis of true fraternity.

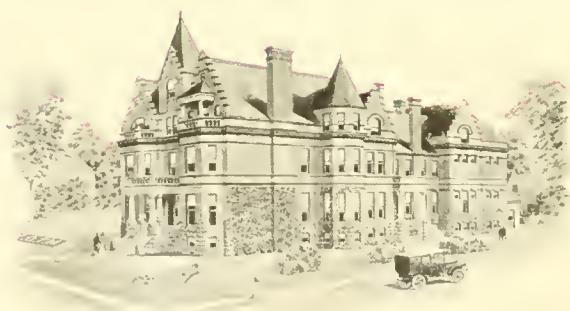

We stand for an undivided Americanism speaking for our fraternal hosts in the United States and Canada, and are unalterably opposed to a hyphenated citizenship.

We register our belief in liberty, law and order under governmental authority, as opposed to autocracy and might and likewise to Bolshevism with the mob. We cast aside the red flag as un-American.

We challenge for membership in our Association any person unwilling to subscribe to the doctrine "America first, America only," and we pledge our last full measure of devotion to the two governments under which our Association is established and our membership protected, the flags of the Red, the White, the Blue.

The above tablet is made of east bronze, with double doors—it is fifty inches long, and forty-five and one-half inches high and weighs over one thousand pounds

THE WORLD WAR

ON June 28, 1914, a bullet, smaller than a sewing thimble, pierced the vitals of the Prince Imperial of Austria-Hungary and brought down upon the earth a deluge of death, suffering and destruction such as mankind had never before experienced. History simply calls it "The World War," but in these three solemn words is summed up the whole range of human tragedy from the innocent victim in the cradle to the proud nation that over night faded into memory.

WHO CAUSED THE WAR?

Perhaps time will one day definitely and irrefutably place the blame for the war. This much we now know; the train of war-like events that started with the assassination of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the dual throne of Austria-Hungary, at Serajevo, June 28th, 1914, had its inception in Vienna and was fostered by Berlin.

A formal inquiry into the assassination was made, but of this the world heard but little. And then on that ill-omened day, July 23, 1914, Austria-Hungary served its ultimatum on Serbia, demanding the latter submit to humiliating terms—terms utterly uncalled for in the eyes of all nations but those few which were predetermined to accept the slightest pretense to involve all Europe in war.

Austria had no satisfactory proof that Serbia as a nation was involved in the murder of Ferdinand. Serbia, and many other nations as well, knew this and sensed the real intent of the ultimatum was—war. Europe was aghast at the potential evil in the situation. Statesmen of the chief powers of the west tried in vain to temper Austria's belligerency.

Serbia sent her answer to the dual monarch on July 25th, protesting her innocence in the alleged conspiracy. But the little nation, counseled by the Triple Entente and Russia, agreed to Austria's terms. Serbia's tone was conciliatory and she promised to submit all issues involved to the Hague.

Austria, to her undying shame and regret, ignored this reasonable, even humble, offer, and on July 28th formally declared war on Serbia.

Russia had begged the Austrians to postpone action for a few days at least, but Vienna was truculent, and on July 27th the Russians formally pledged their aid to their Slavic Ally. Thus the controversy became chiefly one between Russia and Austria. Steps were taken by Sayonoff, Foreign Minister of Russia, to avert the impending strife. Perhaps Sayonoff knew too well that Russia was not prepared to fight, and especially without the aid of France, who as yet was neutral, but to the great and unfortunate nation of the Czars belongs indisputably the credit for attempting to prevent war when war was craved by militaristic Germany through her Allies.

Even in the face of this situation, France, nominally Russia's Ally, and England joined in an endeavor to establish mediation. It seemed for a time, until July 31st, that their efforts would succeed. But Austria had already progressed in her preparation for the invasion of Serbia, and Russia was not far behind her in mobilization.

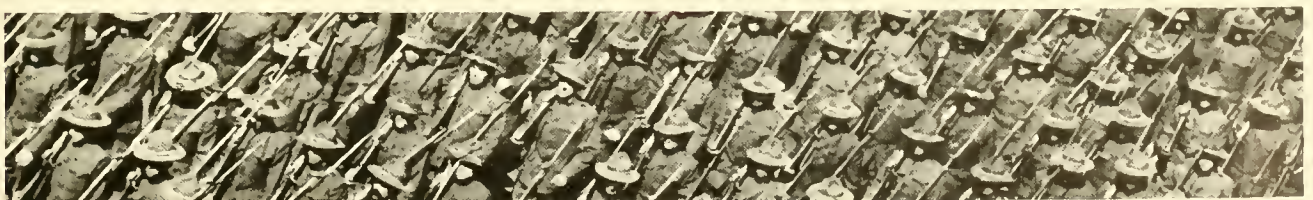

Up to this time the power to fight or to maintain peace lay between Austria and Russia. It seems entirely safe to state that the Austrians, alone, would have responded to the importunities of the Russians for peace. But Germany stood in the way, for every normal mind knows the German government counseled, and probably directed, every move of the Austrians toward a European war.

While Germany has divulged much war correspondence she has never given to the world the communications between her Foreign Office and Vienna during this critical period. Suffice to say, Austria was Germany's stepping stone to the Balkans and Constantinople, for vast ambitions in the east which Teutonic minds had dreamed for many, many years.

Even Rohrbach, the well informed German writer, has gone on record as saying that Germany promised, after the murder at Serajevo, to stand by Austria "for life and death."

Germany denied any knowledge of the Austrian ultimatum prior to its service on Serbia, but on the same day it was dispatched, the German Chancellor informed the principal German Ambassadors that Berlin approved the attitude of Austria and that unless "the dispute be localized," general war was likely.

The decisive influence of Berlin over the entire issue was immediately cognizant to the Russians who on July 26th asked Germany to exert its power in an effort to calm the obstinate and belligerent position which Austria had assumed. England at the same time attempted to induce Germany to sway Austria peacewards. But it is certain that the Kaiser and his court did not try to influence the Austrians to mediate with Serbia.

Of all the nations concerned, Germany was by far the most adequately prepared for war. For decades the militant spirit had been fostered, even worshipped, in the German Empire. Germany knew all the moves of the intrigue and what they meant, yet when a word of conciliation might have prevented the cataclysm, she was silent. Germany let the controversy between Austria and Russia drift to the reefs of war. Germany knew France would side with Russia, but hoped England would remain neutral.

Throughout this stage of the controversy, England believed the whole matter could be settled amicably by arbitration, and on July 24th put forth the proposition that England, Germany, France and Italy decide as a body what should be done by Russia and Austria. France and Italy accepted; Germany declined. Even Russia stated her willingness to accept the British plan and went so far as to offer a formula of her own to solve the portentous problem.

Again, England urged the great powers to confer and Emperor William exchanged telegrams with the Czar—all to no avail. Austria, secretly confident of Germany's support, plunged on toward Serbia—and ultimate destruction.

Both England and France wanted peace. They were friendly to Russia but honestly hoped Austria would concede some points and avoid a general war. The French were the more involved of the two on account of France's alliance with Russia. The English strangely held aloof from promising aid to her old ally, the French; probably held back by a sincere, if selfish desire to keep the British Empire out of an European embroglio—the first for Britain since the battle of Waterloo. Up to the 31st of July, the British were still withholding positive promises to the French.

All of these important and fruitless moves and counter-moves filled the ten pregnant days from July 23rd to August 1. The powers were playing a careful game of chess for gigantic stakes. Each nation protested its good intentions for peace. But the greedy eyes of the militarists were fixed on the Suez Canal, the East, Africa, and other prize pawns in the international contest, and in their hearts the statesmen knew the inevitable time had come when the racial hatreds brewing from Napoleon's time were ready to boil over. Germany was the keystone of the situation and she meant to light the fuse regardless of her superficial displays to bring about peace.

On July 30th Emperor William telegraphed the Czar, protesting strongly against the Russian mobilization, which St. Petersburg claimed was directed solely against Austria. The Russian war office made its orders general. On July 31st Germany again demanded a disavowal within 12 hours. The Russian answer was an order for the mobilization of the entire army. Once more Germany notified Russia that unless a satisfactory offer was immediately made, war would be declared, and at 7:10 p. m., August 1st, 1914, the World War began.

THE VORTEX

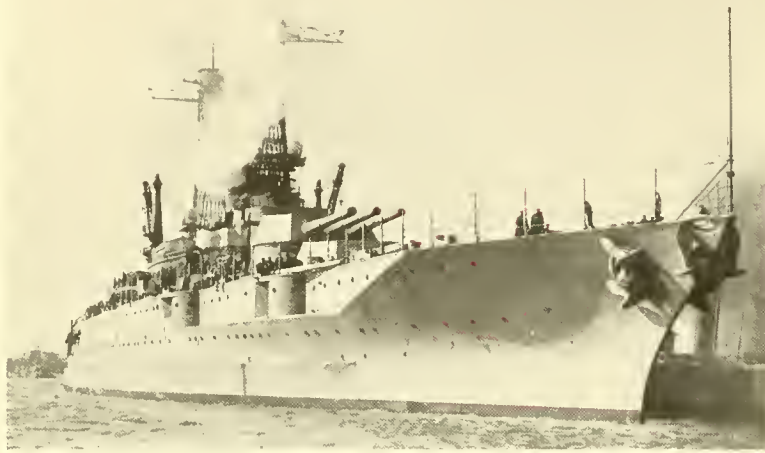

Followed nation upon nation into the World War arena. Germany declared war on France, August 3rd.

England took sides with France on August 1st with an assurance that the British fleet would engage any German fleet in event of an attack on French coasts on shipping. On August 3rd Germany demanded free passage for her troops through Belgium. The Belgians promptly refused, and on August 4th the Germans crossed the border, to be met and fiercely fought by the small but valiant army of King Albert. This wanton invasion precipitated England actively in the conflict, and the long hand of war began to be felt in Canada, Australia and all parts of the British Empire. Little Montenegro immediately came to the defense of her Slavic sisters, Serbia and Russia.

THE FIRST SHOTS

Despite the trend of events, it was not until August 16th that the Germans and Russians engaged in heavy fighting. In the meantime Austria had commenced shelling Belgrade, the Serbian capital, on July 29th.

In the west the Germans in their first flush of victory quickly pushed on through Belgium and almost reached Paris in one of the greatest campaigns of the war. The grey hordes were hindered by the brave Belgians and stopped by England's "contemptible little army" of 120,000 Territorials and the French troops that were rushed to the north.

One of Uncle Sam's big steps in the war bridge across the Atlantic

Then came the first battle of the Marne and three days of desperate fighting, September 8th to 11th, when the Germans received their first serious setback and retreated to their line of prepared defense, which they were fated to hold for over two years. It was the first defeat for a German army in the open field since the days when Bonaparte dictated peace terms in Berlin.

On September 15th the first battle of the Aisne began. On October 9th Antwerp fell, and on November 5th Great Britain declared war on Turkey.

Then on Christmas Eve, 1914, came the first air raid on England, which stirred to the depths, the hatred of the people of the Triple Entente—France, Russia, and England, and aroused the indignation of the entire neutral world.

THE U-BOAT BLOCKADE

Nineteen hundred fifteen was ushered in by the establishment of the U-boat blockade of England on February 18th. A week later the Allied fleet attacked the Dardanelles.

The war had already brought forth many surprises in fighting machinery. Guns of a size and range never before known quickly smashed fortresses supposed impregnable; aircraft began to dot the skies above the battle fields; the submarine had opened up a new field of destruction; giant Zeppelins promised much to Germany's war ambitions.

The first gas attack came with the Second Battle of Ypres, April 22nd. Allied soldiers fell by thousands before the dread fumes. The Canadian soldiers suffered heavily in this attack. Even the Germans were as yet so inexperienced with their new weapon that many of them were gassed. Had they then realized the power of gas and known how to correctly employ it, the history of the conflict might have been quite differently written.

THE LUSITANIA

America, nominally neutral, nevertheless was horrified at the atrocities perpetrated by the Germans upon innocent civilians. American sympathy as a whole was with the Triple Entente. Then came the wanton sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine on May 7th, 1915. The echo was heard in Belleau Woods later on when the dough-boys rolled up the crack German regiments, yelling as they plunged on, the avenging battle cry, "Lusitania! Lusitania!"

Among the other important events of the year were the declaration of war by Italy on Austria May 23rd, and the fall of Warsaw on August 4th.

VERDUN

February 1st, 1916, saw the beginning of the famous siege of Verdun, one of the brightest—and bloodiest—episodes in the history of the war.

On August 27th Rumania entered the war. On November 13th the British won a victory on the Ancre. On December 20th President Wilson sent his first peace note.

ENTRY OF THE UNITED STATES

Germany's mistakes were legion. On February 1st, 1917, Berlin notified the world that the U-Boat war henceforward would be unrestricted. Two days later the United States broke with Germany, and to most Americans actual warfare between the two countries seemed only a question of weeks. Notes passed to and fro over the cables for a few weeks, but the Germans were too steeped in the blood lust; the memory of the Lusitania was too poignant, and on April 6th, 1917, the United States formally declared war on Germany. The war lords of Berlin sneered and scoffed, but a few weeks later, on May 18th, the Selective Draft Law was passed and America prepared to gird herself for battle.

Russia, meanwhile, had begun to crumble. The Czar abdicated on March 15th, 1917, and after a few months of revolution and counter-revolution, Lenine and Trotzky established the Bolshevik regime by their coupe d'etat of November 7th. The Russian bear, wounded, exhausted, hors de combat, was lost to the Allied cause.

THE LAST YEAR

Early in January, 1918, President Wilson announced his historic "Fourteen Points" which subsequently figured largely in the negotiations between the various nations involved in the war. But the most encouraging event of the period from the view point of the Allies, was the appointment, on March 28, of General Foch as Generalissimo, just one week after the Germans began their spring offensive. Foch typified the new spirit of solidarity that had, of desperate expediency, developed among the various armies of the Allies. The terrific German assaults in March, May and June met solid resistance from a united front.

Allied morale was greatly strengthened by the leadership of Foch and the steady influx of American soldiers. By July 2, 1918, more than 1,000,000 "dough-boys" were in France, eager to take their places at the front. In fact, Americans in detached units had already distinguished themselves in several engagements at various sections of the battle line.

Providence now seemed to aid the Allies. On June 15th the great Austrian offensive against Italy was launched. The world waited in suspense as the terrific struggle took place. Italy held her ground, and better. Then the heavens opened and a deluge of rain swelled the Piave, destroying the bridge of the Austrians—trapping them like rats. Six days later, on June 23rd, the Austrians were in full retreat, broken, demoralized, utterly vanquished in the greatest of the many military defeats that have been the signal lot of the dual monarchy.

THE BEGINNING OF THE END

July found the Allied countries watching the war clouds which foretold of the coming supreme offensive of the German armies. No one knew what the outcome would be, and when the blow fell on the 15th, extreme anxiety was felt everywhere, except in those quarters near the front where the hollowness of the German military structure was doubtless plainly apparent. The battle raged with unprecedented fury for three days and then Foch struck a terrible blow at the enemy. The counter attack was a signal for a general onslaught by the British, French and Americans against the Germans. In quick succession the French and Americans swept on at the Marne and Aisne; Soissons was recovered; the British delivered a smashing attack at Amiens; Bapaume, Noyon and Peronne were regained. By September 1st the German line at Drocourt-Queant had been breached, and on the 27th the Hindenburg line was broken.

Bulgaria surrendered on September 29th, and the next day Damascus fell. October 1st St. Quentin was regained; the 4th, Cambrai. On the 13th the French recovered Laon. By October 25th, the British were in Irkutsk and Homs; Ostend, Lille and Douai were regained; the Belgian coast was clear of the Hun and Ludendorff had resigned.

Turkey, crestfallen and battered, was granted an armistice on October 30th. Austria surrendered on November 3rd, and on the next day the Versailles armistice agreement was drawn up.

Americans reached Sedan November 6th. On the 9th the Kaiser abdicated and Berlin was in the throes of a revolution. The Kaiser's flight to Holland took place on November 10th, the same day the British were at Mons.

November 11th, 1918, the Armistice was signed and civilization removed from jeopardy.

THE PEACE OF VERSAILLES

Five years to a day after the assassination at Serajevo, the Treaty, formally ending the World War between Germany and the Allies, was signed in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles, France, on June 28th, 1919.

The terms were terrible but just and necessary. True, Germany had to give up rich portions of her empire, submit to plebiscites in others, and agree to pay huge indemnities. But that which she lost, in large part, was never truly German in origin nor German in heart, and the penalty imposed met with almost universal approval.

And so with Austria. The representatives of the wretched monarchy signed the Treaty in the same mirrored room on September 10, 1919. Never before in all the unglorious history of the Hapsburgs was Austria forced to submit to such abject humiliation as that pressed upon her at Versailles.

Bulgaria and Turkey eventually underwent a similar operation at the hands of the Allied Commissioners. Disintegrated into a number of small individual states, Hungary lost her identity as a nation.

AND NOW

Today the World nominally is at Peace. The greatest war growing out of the World War has ended with the signatures of Poland and Russia on a treaty of peace which humiliates neither nation, enables the former to mend her economic and social affairs, and signifies that Bolshevism is on the wane.

Although the United States technically is at war with Germany, actual peace conditions between the two countries probably will soon become a reality. The quadrennial election is over with its usual turbulence; record breaking crops have been attained; production is on the increase; prices are becoming more stabilized. The morale of the nation is gradually recuperating from the stress of war and post-war conditions and the country looks forward confidently, hopefully and cheerfully to the era that lies ahead.

CANADA'S PART IN THE WAR

THIS is the war story of the gallant sons of Canada, telling with extreme briefness their record of glory as related in the formal report of the Department of Public Information of Ottawa.

Save only that it lacks the beautiful tales of personal valor, of shining deeds of sacrifice performed in the muck and hell of the worst war of the ages, this, then, is the story of Canada.

HOW THE WAR FOUND CANADA

In the early months of 1914 Canada had virtually no army. There did exist a standing force of 3,000 men, used chiefly to garrison fortresses, and also to train militiamen. The militia was a lightly trained, defensive force whose number in 1913 was about 60,000.

BUILDING SWIFTLY

In the late summer and early autumn of 1914, the First Canadian Division of 33,000 men was raised, trained and sent across the Atlantic, leaving Gaspé Bay October 3, and after a three months interval of final drilling in England, they landed in France, at Ste. Nazaire, February 11, 1915.

The heels of the soldiers of the First Division had hardly ceased drumming the soil of Canada when the Second Division was formed and landed in France September 14.

Just before Christmas of 1915 the Third Division was authorized and had disembarked in France early in 1916. In the middle of August, 1916, the Fourth Division joined the Canadian Corps. The Canadian Cavalry Brigade appeared in France in 1915.

Upon the completion of the Canadian Army Corps the Dominion policy was to keep up only a few divisions, but always to maintain these at full strength in order that the troops might have the encouragement of full ranks. In all more than 418,000 members of the Canadian Expeditionary forces crossed the Atlantic for service overseas.

WHAT CANADA DID

Following these divisions down the long, red road we find that the First Division distinguished itself in the second Battle of Ypres, April 22, and again at Festubert and Givenchy in May and June. In 1916 the Canadians, now three divisions strong, were locked in death grips with the enemy at St. Eloi in April, and at Sanctuary Wood and Hooze in June. Through September, October and November the four divisions fought in the Battle of the Somme, with particularly meritorious conduct at Courcellette, Mouquet Farm, and the Kenora, Regina and Desire Trenches.

But it was at Vimy Ridge in 1917 that the star of Canada's bravery shone with surpassing glory. Canadian troops bore the burden of this offensive and of Alleux and Fresnoy, and also fought with singular success in the advance of Lens and the taking of Hill 70 in August. And then came Passchendaele, in October and November. With the brave men of Canada falling at every step in the face of bitter firing, the advance went on. Every Canadian objective was taken.

In 1918 the Canadian Cavalry, Motor Machine Guns, and Railway Troops actively resisted the German advance in March. The Battle of Amiens found the Canadian Corps in the centre of the British Front. It was here that the Canadians pushed ahead 14,000 yards the first day, the deepest advance made in one day during the entire war. In the Battle of Arras the Canadians aided materially in the breaking of the Drocourt-Queant line, a part of the Hindenburg system. Canadian losses were severe in these two engagements, but the number of prisoners taken exceeded the losses.

Heavy losses again marked the next major action of Canadians, the Battle of Cambrai. Large captures of men and material signalized the taking of Cambrai. In the last bloody stages of the battle Denain was taken by the Canadians on October 20, Valenciennes on November 2 and Mons at 4 a. m. on November 11, seven hours before the signing of the armistice.

Canadians took 45,000 prisoners in the course of the war, 850 artillery guns and 4,200 machine guns, and retook 130 towns and villages, liberating 310,000 French and Belgian civilians. Canadian units also served in Palestine, Macedonia and Russia.

CANADIAN CAVALRY

The C. A. C. and the Canadian Cavalry fought separately. The cavalry distinguished themselves in

Burial of a Canadian nurse, killed in a hospital by a German bomb

March, 1917, by the capture of six villages in two days and in December gave valuable help in the attack on Villers-Guislains. In the German offensive of March and April, 1918, the cavalry performed meritorious work suffering severe losses at Bois Moreuil, Rille Wood and elsewhere. The Brigade fought as part of the Canadian Corps in the second Battle of Amiens and captured the town of Le Cateau in the great advance that helped end the fighting.

Operating behind the combat units were thousands of Canadians whose devotion to the cause were the means of keeping the combat units in splendid morale.

Among these were the Canadian Railway Troops, immediately behind the lines, the Forestry Troops, Army Medical Corps, Garrison Duty men, Royal Air Force, Royal Naval Air Service and Royal Flying Corps, in addition to those thousands of patriots whose duty held them at home at their callings, or whose age deprived them of the honor of serving His Majesty, The King. Canada served, with every fiber of her broad-flung strength, and served well.

THE UNITED STATES IN THE WAR

THE Kaiser struck his first blow at the neutrality of the United States early in February, 1915, when he arbitrarily advised the world as to where he would permit the ships of his enemies and of neutrals to pass without attacks from German U-boats. A few days later President Wilson, in his first note, entered a strong protest, warning Germany she would be held to strict account were one American life taken or one American ship attacked.

The spirited discussion which followed was sharply punctuated by the sinking of the Lusitania on May 7th. More notes followed, the Kaiser adroitly evading culpable answers. Finally, on January 31, 1917, the last shreds of the mask fell away and Germany was revealed in all her perfidy when the Kaiser declared that all ships attempting to approach the coasts of England and Ireland would be sunk without warning. Forty-eight hours after the proclamation of unrestricted U-boat warfare, the United States broke with Germany, and on April 6, 1917, war between the two countries was formally declared.

Immediately the spirit of war dominated the United States and all else was subordinated in a herculean effort to achieve honorably and effectively the United States full participation in the struggle. The Draft was quickly put into effect and soon the long line of olive drab began to flow across the Atlantic, ever swelling, never stopping until the foe was utterly vanquished.

It was in June, 1917, that General Pershing arrived in France with the first contingent of the United States Expeditionary Forces. And who can appraise the inspiration the war-worn French received, when, standing over the tomb of the Frenchman who helped the United States to freedom in 1776, General Pershing uttered that prophecy and pledge, "Lafayette, we are here!"

Following hurried greetings, the United States forces began at once to prepare for the grim warfare ahead. A few months of intensive training and general organization ensued and then winter set in, bringing a respite for the battle weary and an opportunity to whip into shape the newcomers from America.

CANTIGNY

Spring 1918 opened in France with the First Division occupying a sector in the vicinity of Bretenil, northwest of Montdidier.

And then on the morning of May 28th the First Division went into action, capturing Cantigny and all other objectives. The engagement relative to the front was of minor importance but it revealed the American soldiers as real fighters, capable of taking their place among the proved warriors of the Allies.

CHATEAU-THIERRY

Meanwhile the Germans, with Paris their objective, turned their furious offensive upon the Aisne and the Third Division was rushed with all speed to the Marne. Its machine gun battalion, pushing on ahead to meet this call, successfully held the bridgehead opposite Chateau-Thierry. The French order of the day, referring to this action, reads:

"The courage of the Americans was beyond all praise. The Colonials themselves, though accustomed to acts of heroism, were struck by the wonderful morale in the face of fire and the extraordinary cool headedness of their Allies. The episode of Chateau-Thierry will remain as one of the brilliant pages of the war."

BOURESCHES, BELLEAU WOOD, VAUX

The Second Division, which had been in reserve near Montdidier, was sent at the same time by every available means of transport to help in the effort at holding back the enemy, who with increasing forces was bearing down upon Paris.

On June 6, against the best German guard divisions, the Marines led a charge which, by midnight, had ended in the capture of the village and railroad station of Bouresches.

The next objective was Belleau Wood, a point of vital importance. In this attack the conduct of the 4th Brigade of the 2nd Division was so brilliant, in combat with a numerous and ferocious enemy, that after the capture of Belleau Wood the General commanding the 6th French Army decided it should henceforth be called "Marine Brigade Wood." The 3rd Brigade of Marines was cited by the French 6th Army as having given a "superb example of dash, abnegation and sacrifice," and as having taken an important part in the victorious attack which led to the evacuation of French territory and which forced the enemy to solicit an armistice.

Though the 2nd Division had been fighting steadily for over two weeks, it was still able, before being relieved, to seize the village of Vaux.

THE SECOND BATTLE OF THE MARNE

On July 15, after a pause for reorganization, the enemy launched a formidable onslaught from Chateau-Thierry to the Argonne. It was to be the last. Within forty-eight hours the Allies had broken this offensive. The six American divisions thrown along the Marne did their large share in checking the German advance.

On July 18, in the thrust toward Soissons, the place of honor was given to the 1st and 2nd American Divisions, in company with French troops chosen for their prestige on the battlefield. By the first days of August, the Marne salient, into which the enemy had imprudently driven hundreds of thousands of his best troops, had been completely wiped out.

GENERAL PERSHING IN COMMAND

On August 10, the First Army was organized under the personal command of General Pershing.

In view of the important part the Americans were now to play it was necessary for them to take over a permanent portion of the line which extended from east of the Moselle River to a point near Verdun. The operations in this sector resulted in signal success: On September 12, the First Army wiped out the Saint-Mihiel salient, it released the inhabitants of many villages, took 16,000 prisoners, 443 guns, a great quantity of material, and it established the new lines in a position to threaten Metz.

The power of the American Army had asserted itself. The gratitude of the French to the Commander-in-Chief was threefold; for this foresight in planning from the first for an army of millions, for his judgment in realizing that his soldiers must exercise themselves not in trenches, but in a war of movement, and for his character, so essentially American, which in the most critical moments laid aside all questions of personal vanity, in a disinterested determination that the cause, for which his men were giving their lives, should triumph.

THE MEUSE ARGONNE OFFENSIVE

Twelve days later, hostilities were to be resumed on a much larger scale; at daybreak, on September 26, a barrage fire which for eleven hours illuminated the sky, announced that the American offensive had been launched, between the Argonne forest and the Meuse river.

This battle—one of the most important operations of the war—was to continue until the enemy capitulated. The objectives assigned to General Pershing's Army were of paramount importance. The Germans realized that if they could not hold their line of communications at this point, all would be lost for them. They consequently withdrew division after division from the north, to fling them in desperation against the Americans.

Out of nine divisions which took part in this brilliant attack, sustained for 47 days, only three were in possession of their organic artillery or had ever taken part in active war and five divisions came in contact with their artillery for the first time on the battlefield. Two divisions had spent about sixty days in calm sectors, one had been ten, another sixteen days in the trenches, two had never been under fire. They were provided with only three-quarters the regulation number of horses and wagons, and the natural difficulties which they had to face seemed insurmountable. Yet in spite of roads heavy with mud, of deep ravines, thick woods and steep hills, the Americans pushed steadily on. Not at any time superior in numbers to the enemy, during this long struggle, they always had the upper hand.

On October 26, at the end of the first month, the troops had made an average advance of 10 miles on a 20 mile front, they had freed 45 villages from the Argonne to the Meuse, they had liberated 200 square miles of territory, and they had penetrated the four strongest German systems of trenches, including the Hindenburg line. The aviators had shot down 230 airplanes and 20 balloons.

The gains from November 1 to November 5 brought the Americans to within 5 miles of the Metz-Sedan railroad, one of the two main lines connecting France with Germany. Five days before the armistice was signed, Marshal Foch sent General Pershing the following message:

"Operations since November 1, by the First American Army, have already assured, thanks to the valor of the High Command, and to the energy and the bravery of the troops, results of the greatest importance. I am happy to offer you my warmest congratulations on the success of these operations."

Fifteen out of the twenty-two divisions engaged had been twice in action during the Meuse-Argonne battle, in which the Americans sustained 100,000 casualties.

On November 11, 1918, an armistice was signed, the enemy capitulated: the war was won.

These few pages cannot begin to recite all of the glorious achievements of Americans in the World War. The feat of the Navy in transporting millions of American soldiers and countless tons of supplies is a war epoch in itself. And in hundreds of other ways Americans toiled and fought in many lands under all flags of the Allied nations, to do their very best in the cause of humanity.

THE PRICE OF WAR

NO one on earth will ever know what the World War cost in human lives and suffering, but the official data and official estimates show in cold figures appalling numbers of dead and wounded in history's epic fight for democracy.

Fifteen nations, three of them born of the War, engaged in the gigantic struggle against four other established powers. In all nearly 60,000,000 soldiers were involved and now over 7,000,000 of them are dead and 6,000,000 incapacitated for life.

Besides, civilians innocently engaged were slain. Over 100,000 were killed by U-boats, air raids and other wanton acts of the Central powers. Add to these figures, the 4,000,000 Armenians, Syrians, Jews, and Greeks massacred or starved by the Turks; the 1,085,441 Serbians killed by disease or massacred; and the 4,000,000 deaths from "flu" epidemics. The sum total of non-military losses is larger even than the direct toll of battle. Altogether the World War was the most terrific and far-reaching catastrophe that has ever visited the human race and its evil influence will be felt for decades to come.

THE TRAGIC TOTAL

Adding the civilian mortality, caused directly or otherwise by the war, to the military losses, the figures show:

Military deaths	7,781,806
Civilian deaths	9,185,523
Grand Total	16,967,329

Besides, there are uncounted hosts of men and women and children who starved to death or were butchered at the hands of the Bolsheviki, and the grim spectre of war still overshadows the lives and happiness of many desolate lands.

The First ~ A Maccabee

OSMOND KELLY INGRAM

The first man in the United States forces to lose his life in actual combat

His name was Kelly Ingram;
he was Alabama's son,
And he whistled "Yankee Doodle,"
as he stood beside his gun;
There was laughter in his make-up,
there was manhood in his face,
And he knew the best traditions and the courage of his race;
Now there's not a heart among us
but should swell with loyal pride
When he thinks of Kelly Ingram and the splendid way he died.

On the swift Destroyer Cassin
he was merely gunner's mate,
But up there today, I fancy,
he is standing with the great.

On that grim day last October
his position on the craft
Was that portion of the vessel which the sailors christen aft;
There were deep sea bombs beside him to be dropped upon the Hun
Who makes women folks
his victims and then gloats o'er what he's done.

From the lookout came a warning;
came the cry all sailors fear,
A torpedo was approaching, and the vessel's doom was near;
Ingram saw the streak of danger,
but he saw a little more,
A greater menace faced them than that missile had in store;

If those deep sea bombs beside him were not thrown beneath the wave,
Every man aboard the Cassin soon would find a watery grave.

It was death for him to linger,
but he figured if he ran
And quit his post of duty
'twould be death for every man;

So he stood at his position, threw those depth bombs overboard,
And when that torpedo struck them, he went forth to meet his Lord.

Oh, I don't know how to say it,
but these whole United States Should remember Kelly Ingram—he who died to save his mates.

THE MACCABEES IN THE WORLD WAR

AT the beginning of the Great World War, The Maccabees, like all other Fraternal Beneficiary Associations and like Insurance Companies, was confronted with the problem of how they should deal with the question of insurance protection upon the lives of their members who might become involved in the struggle. The laws of nearly all such insurance Organizations relieved the Associations from any liability under their contracts with the members in case of loss of life while engaged in war.

THE FIRST TOLLS

It was some considerable time after the beginning of the war before any Maccabee lost his life in that struggle, but as the war progressed, Canada, one of the countries under the jurisdiction of The Maccabees, began reporting war losses among the members of our tents located in that country. There was no provision for the payment of these losses, under the laws of The Maccabees. For the purpose of considering this subject, the Supreme Commander called a Special Review of the Supreme Tent, which met in Detroit, Michigan, August 7, 1916.

In his call for this Special Review, the first matter recommended for consideration by him was that of making such change in the laws of the Order as would assure to Maccabees and their beneficiaries, the fullest protection of the Order while they were engaged in the service of their Country, by the creation of a patriotic fund for such purposes, thus maintaining the integrity of the life benefit fund of the Order and at the same time giving encouragement to all in the performance of their duty to their country, under the flag of which they and their families receive protection of life and property.

In this connection the Supreme Commander, in his message to this Special Review, said:

"It has ever been the boast of The Maccabees that one of its main objects was to create and maintain a patriotic interest on the part of its members, not only in affairs that pertain to their own locality, their own duty to Home and Loved Ones, but to their Country as well.

The Order of The Maccabees is founded upon the history and tradition of the Ancient Maccabees, and takes for its exemplar one of the most patriotic characters in all the history of the world.

The name and fame of Judas Maccabeus will ever be cherished because of his undying devotion to Country as well as Home and Friends, and it was upon this foundation that the Order of The Maccabees was established.

THE PLEDGE OF HONOR

As you are well aware, one of the questions asked an applicant for membership, as he appears for initiation, is whether he is willing to give up his life for his Country, should such a sacrifice be demanded, and we demand an affirmative answer to this question; nothing else would be accepted, so it must be understood that every man whose name is enrolled upon our records today as a member, has given his Pledge of Honor that he would be true to his Country, and if necessary would give up his life for it.

Only twice during the history of this Organization have emergencies arisen when the protection of the Order was needed for the families of the men of the Order who had enlisted in the service of their Country and lost their lives in following the Flag, and on both occasions the Order promptly and generously provided for the home and families of such members.

It will be remembered in this connection that both of these events—the Boer War and the Spanish-American War—occurred prior to the time when our rates of contribution were placed upon a scientific basis. The laws of the Association then, as now, exempted it from liability in such cases, but through the power of dispensation, approved by the Board of Trustees of the Association, action was taken which temporarily set aside the provision in the Laws relating to this subject, and payments were made as though there were no such prohibition.

When our rates of contribution were adjusted in 1901 to an adequate and scientific basis, of course only normal conditions were taken into calculation. In other words, the Mortality Table upon which these rates of contribution were based did not contemplate the deaths that might result from war, hence it would be unwise and unsafe, not at all justified by our calculations, to impose upon the Life Benefit Fund of the Association any obligations growing out of our duty to the member and his family while engaged in the service of his Country during war.

A BIG PROBLEM

When the European War broke out, some two years ago, it was of such a character, and its consequences thought to be so far reaching, that the granting of such a dispensation was not deemed advisable; yet all in authority have contended that at the proper time all claims against the Order, arising out of that conflict, should be paid and would be paid.

We have heard a great deal of war and rumours of war for two or more years, and while none of us wish to see further strife and international disturbances, we believe that the time has come when we should as an organization, square our conduct with our professions.

We believe we should go on record in an affirmative way in this connection, declaring in no uncertain manner that it is not only the duty of the individual member to render such service, but that it is equally the duty of his fellow members in the Order to keep his insurance protection in full force while he is thus serving his Country.

THE MACCABEE PATRIOTIC FUND

It is, therefore, proposed that there shall be created what may be called a Patriotic Fund, this fund to be established by a special assessment upon every member regardless of age, amount of benefits, or time of entrance into the Order, and when so established, the fund shall be maintained sacredly for the purpose of taking care of such obligations as arise from service in the army or navy.

Certainly every member of the Order who is not able or so situated that he cannot render this patriotic service, should be thrice willing to contribute to a fund which will make certain the ample protection of the dependents of those members who can, and will render it."

This part of the Supreme Commander's report was referred to the Committee on new business, and this Committee, in due time, through its Chairman, Ed. L. Young, made the following report which after full and general discussion of the matter was adopted:

To the Officers and Members of the Supreme Tent:

The Committee on New Business begs leave to make report on the proposed amendment to the laws of the Association as submitted to us:

"First. This is a proposition to clearly set forth the policy of The Maccabees with reference to the enlistment of members in the armies of the United States or other countries of which they are citizens or in which they have declared their purpose to become citizens, under the law. Also for the establishment of a patriotic fund adequate to the generous care of such members, their needy families and dependents.

We here and now declare it to be the policy and purpose of The Maccabees to encourage and recognize members who are lawful citizens of any nation in which our Association has jurisdiction, who shall in the spirit of true patriotism, enlist in the army or navy of such country in time of war. No virtue is more dominant in the tenets of Maccabeeism than that of patriotism which burns out upon every page of our ritualism and distinguishes the life and sacrifices of Judas Maccabeus, one of the first martyrs of genuine chivalry, and for whom our order is named. His patriotism is not only the most striking example in sacred history of the willingness of a man to die for his country, but likewise to live for it. He it was, who in dividing the spoils of war, was first to set aside a definite portion for the generous care of the widows and orphans. In that spirit The Maccabees today, enforcing its purpose with adequate laws, guarantees in full the insurance protection of such members now and hereafter, together with generous care of the families and dependents of such members through its General Relief department.

To this end we recommend that a proviso be added to section 263 of the general laws of the Association making this purpose effective and legal.

We also recommend that Section 48 of the general laws be amended so as to give full authority to the Supreme Board of Trustees to levy upon the entire membership of the Association such special assessments as may be needed to meet any national emergency and all such relief demands in case of war being declared by any country in which our Association has jurisdiction, provided that such special assessments shall not exceed one dollar at any one time."

In pursuance of the action of the Special Review of the Supreme Tent in August, 1916, it was found necessary to levy two assessments of $1.00 each upon the entire membership of the Association, to provide the necessary funds to pay the death losses occurring on account of the war.

The proceeds of these two assessments amounted to $606,491.25. From this fund, 478 death claims, amounting to $470,252.38 were paid. Every claim, for which proofs have been filed, was paid immediately upon the completion of the proofs, the balance remaining in the fund, after the payment of all obligations against it, was, by order of the Supreme Tent session of 1919, transferred to the Life Benefit Fund.

The Supreme Commander in his report to the Supreme Tent Review, held in Chicago, 1919, referring to these war claims, said:

"In the payment of these 'war claims' our Association did only its plain duty, and we should be very proud of the manner in which the membership everywhere responded to the demands for this service. On our 'Service Flag' to-day, as it hangs in this hall are over four hundred 'Gold Stars,' every one of them representing the splendid patriotic spirit that characterized our membership in this great struggle. To the memory of these brave boys who made the 'supreme sacrifice' we pay our grateful tribute of love and loyalty, conscious of the fact that we were as true to them and theirs as they were to the flag of their country.

At the proper time, later in the session, we will do ourselves the honor of holding suitable memorial services to the memory of our noble dead."

Sir Knight Thomas Watson, Supreme Record Keeper, in his report to the Supreme Tent Review of 1919, referring to these war claims, said:

"No brighter page in the history of Maccabecism had ever been written than that relating to the Patriotic Fund, its creation, the almost unanimous response made to the call by the membership, and its distribution in the payment of death claims of those heroes who laid down their lives in behalf of their country. The patriotism and loyalty of the membership were put to the test and it was not found wanting. True, there were a few who thought that the death claims of those who were killed in war should be paid from the Life Benefit Fund, forgetful of the fact that the laws of the Association do not provide for the payment of the death claims of those who die as the result of war. The most of those were easily convinced that this could not be done."

On the afternoon of the third day of the Supreme Review of 1919, held in Chicago, Memorial Services were held in the large auditorium of the La Salle Hotel, Chicago. The room was crowded to its capacity. Sir Knight Judge Wm. M. Kent of New York, Chairman of the Memorial Committee, reported as follows:

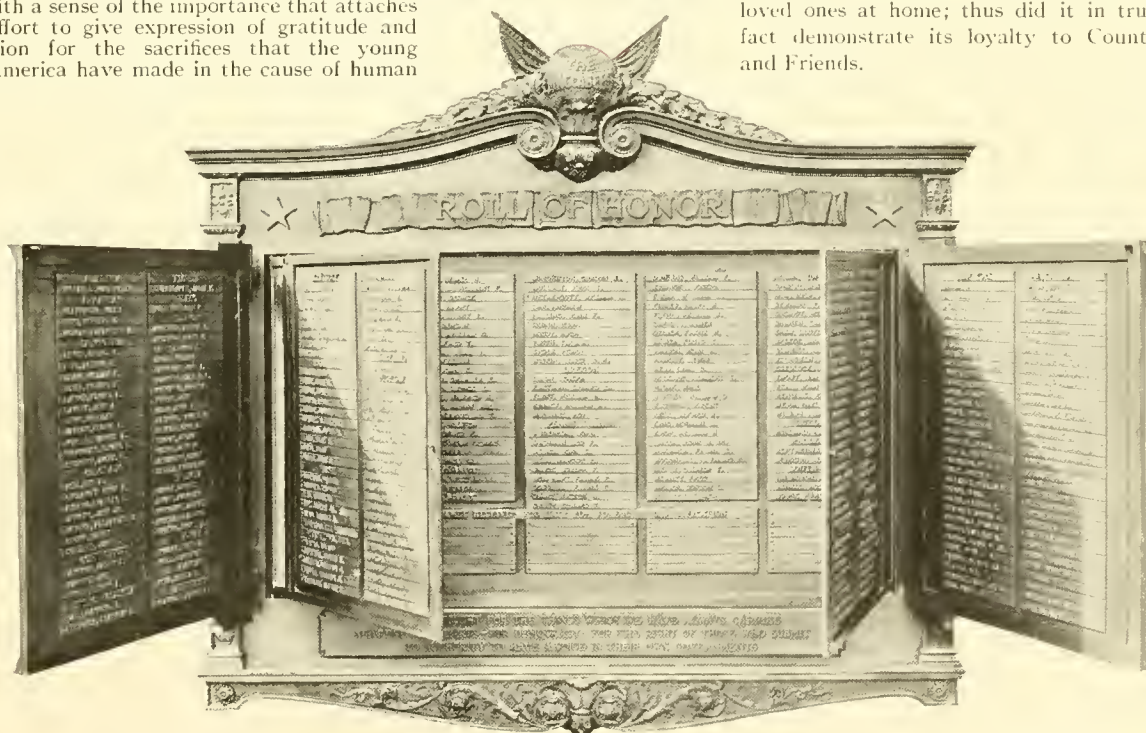

"Your Committee approaches another phase of its memorial service with a sense of the importance that attaches to any effort to give expression of gratitude and appreciation for the sacrifices that the young men of America have made in the cause of human liberty. Officially we communicate to our brothers upon this floor the information that from the ranks of the members of this Order, and from the more than sixteen thousand of its membership who went forth in the defense of the principles of American liberty, four hundred seventy-eight Maccabees were taken by the fate of war and removed from the land of the living. We are conscious of the fact that in the going out of each and every one some story of valor, of patient suffering, or determined effort to serve could be unfolded. The hearts of all of us here assembled beat with the impulse of special tribute to each and every one of them. However, they themselves would not have it so. There is a grander and more glorious thought in the tribute which a grateful brotherhood would pay to these, our heroes. In living they had identified themselves with the noble principles of this Order. To them the principle of protecting their loved ones after death, was a living, vital thing. To them the obligation of Maccabean manhood was an ever-present reality. To them the good fellowship of a fraternity like ours appealed and had a value. These were men who needed no clarion call to the service of their country in its hour of danger to awaken the heart beats of true fellowship and fidelity to home and loved ones. The more readily then did they embrace the opportunity to go forth as American citizens and we at this time find added comfort in the thought that in so going, they brought honor and renown to this Order. Some, from the hardships of camp life, died in the hospitals at home; some joined the great majority while braving the dangers of the high seas; many indeed were counted among those whose blood moistened the stricken fields of France and Belgium, but they all died helping to drive home, through the stupidity of the German mind, the compelling fact—that which we now believe has been established, never again to be questioned, that the force of America's strength is and ever will be dedicated and so engaged, is unconquerable, irresistible and shall be overwhelming. So with humble words we pay our tribute of respect to these brothers who in dying have brought so much honor to our Order.

"We would recommend that the Board of Trustees be authorized to place a suitable Memorial Tablet, at the office of the Supreme Tent, to the end that the memory of these honored dead be perpetuated in Maccabean history." Which report was unanimously adopted.

In pursuance of this action of the Supreme Tent Review of 1919, the Memorial Tablet, cuts of which appear herein, was authorized by the Board of Trustees of the Supreme Tent. The design is unique—one developed by Supreme Commander Markey—and manufactured by the McCoy Bronze Company of Detroit, Michigan.

Thus has the Order taught patriotism and loyalty to Country during all its years of operation, thus did the Order nobly meet the exigencies of this World War in the way of encouragement to its members and to their families; thus did it fulfil its every obligation morally and financially to its heroic dead and their loved ones at home; thus did it in truth and in fact demonstrate its loyalty to Country, Home and Friends.

In Flanders Fields

BY LIEUT. COL. JOHN D. McCRAE

(Written during the second battle of Ypres, April, 1915.
The author, Dr. John McCrae of Montreal, Canada, was killed on duty in Flanders, January 28, 1918.)

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly,
Scarce heard amidst the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe!
To you from falling hands, we throw
The torch. Be yours to hold it high!
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

America's Answer

BY R. W. LILLIARD

(Written after the death of Lieut. Col. McCrae)

Rest ye in peace, ye Flanders' dead,
The fight that ye so bravely led We've taken up. And we will keep
True faith with you who lie asleep
With each a cross to mark his bed,
And poppies blowing overhead,
Where once his own life blood run red,
So let your rest be sweet and deep
In Flanders fields.

Fear not that ye have died for naught.
The torch ye threw to us we caught.
Ten million hands will hold it high
And freedom's light shall never die!
We've learned the lesson that ye taught
In Flanders fields.

In Memoriam

A year has passed, and peace has reigned
O'er Flanders' fields, where deep blood stained
The soil where now the crosses stand—
To mark the graves of that brave band
Who gave their lives to save the land.

They are not dead! They now but rest.
While strength endured, they stood the test.
And now, with honor, let us lay
A mental wreath o'er mounds of clay—
To show our homage on this day.

Let's not in haste forget the score
Which left its scar the wide world o'er.
But, tenderly, may rains and snow
Caress those crosses, row on row,
In Flanders' fields, where poppies blow.
